Course Description: This seminar is designed to be a capstone experience for students receiving their BSS degree and for other students with an interest in interdisciplinary thinking. It is composed of three related modules:

Module 1 (Lead Instructor,). Students will learn about and develop the necessary skills to foster success in all areas of career and professional development after graduation. Students will assess their interests, skills, values, and motivations, learn the steps of researching and preparing for job interviews, and gain an awareness of the world of work. Students will explore career planning through discussions and activities related to professional development, career purpose, and branding to integrate career-specific concepts and develop an intentional plan to evolve professionally following graduation.

Module 2 (Lead Instructor,). This section is designed to provide an opportunity for students to analyze and think critically about the value of their degree in relation to their own strengths. Students will identify, explore and develop their unique strengths as they prepare for graduate school or the world of work. In addition, students will explore foundational teachings of positive psychology and different leadership styles.

Module 3 (Lead Instructor,). This final section of the course will encourage reflection on what you have learned during your BSS program, how your academic experiences have contributed to your intellectual development, and how you can continue to foster intellectual curiosity and to conduct informed analysis in areas beyond the university. We will discuss what it means to be an engaged citizen who uses the knowledge, skills, and analytical approaches fostered by your formal education and applies them to understanding and interacting with society. Special attention will be paid to methods for evaluating political speech, understanding the way that scholarship informs public culture, assessing the reliability and utility of information media, and critically analyzing current events.

Required Texts:
All readings will be made available via handout, on Blackboard, or on reserve at Alden Library.

Attendance Policy: Attendance is required. The only permissible reasons for missing a class relate to documented illness (doctor’s note required), family emergency, religious observance, jury duty or involvement in an authorized university-sponsored activity. Additional assignments may be given to students who miss class because of an excused absence.

Blackboard: Blackboard is an on-line course management system. You will find electronic copies of our syllabus, reading schedule, additional readings and other information on Blackboard. You can also check your grades for our course (and perhaps others). To log onto Blackboard, go to https://blackboard.ohio.edu/.
Technology: A laptop or tablet is needed for some class meetings in Module 1. The instructor will notify the class at least 24 hours prior to class if a tablet or laptop will be needed. A very limited number of computers will be available during class for students without computers. Inform the instructor if you will need to borrow a computer.

Classroom Behavior: As a member of the classroom community, your participation is essential to a lively and engaging class discussion. Therefore, you should turn off all electronics prior to class and stow items out of sight. If you prefer to take notes on a laptop during class, please ask the instructor beforehand. You should plan to arrive on time for class and stay for the duration of the class. Points will be deducted for misuse of technology, tardiness, and early departure.

Accessibility Services: If you are a student who may need accommodations, please contact one of the instructors to discuss your specific needs and how to register with Student Accessibility Services (348 Baker Center, 740.593.2620, or ohio.edu/disabilities), if you have not done so already. In compliance with the Americans with Disabilities Act, all qualified students are entitled to "reasonable accommodations." Please communicate documented accommodations to all three instructors at the start of the semester.

Plagiarism: All of the work you produce for this class must be original. Any ideas or words that you incorporate into your work from other sources must be appropriately documented. Failure to accurately give credit to the work and ideas of others can result in a grade of "F" on work undertaken, failure in the course, and formal disciplinary action, including suspension or expulsion from the university.

Submitting Assignments: All written assignments will be collected at the start of class. Assignments are to be printed and stapled before class. The instructors retain the right to refuse any late or inappropriately submitted work. If you are unable to attend a class meeting and an assignment is due, it is your responsibility to submit the assignment to the instructor on time.

Tentative Schedule of Assignments: All readings and assignments should be completed for the beginning of the class in which they are scheduled. We reserve the right to adjust the readings and assignments if necessary. All substantial changes will be distributed through Blackboard and in hard copy.

Grading: The final grade will be the combined average score of your performance in each module. Assignments will be completed in a variety of ways during this course. Some papers or projects will be completed partially or completely in class—others will be completed entirely outside of class. Details for completion are listed with each assignment. Late work is not acceptable except in cases of documented personal emergencies. Credit will not be given for late assignments. No extra credit will be offered at any point during this course.

Attendance: Attendance in this class is mandatory, just like showing up to work. If you must miss class due to an authorized University activity such as an athletic competition or academic club trip, you must provide written notification at least one week prior to the absence. Missing more than one class without an authorized excuse may impact your module and/or overall grade.
